A LITTLE BIT OF HISTORY...

Kilmessan junction looking east with the old D&M locomotive shed and the signal box on the right

The Dublin & Meath Railway Kilmessan Station

In the 1900's the present hotel was a train station serving as a livery stop for both Meath and the county of Westmeath. At one end is a gateway making it a turn-point for trains returning to Dublin and at the other end is the old Signal cabin which still remains.

The Dublin and Meath railway was incorporated in 1858, to construct a line from Dublin to Athboy and Navan. The original intention of the promoters had been to effect a junction with the Great Southern & Western Railway near Lucan but this idea was abandoned owing to the opposition of the Midland Great Western Railway, who later leased the Meath line for a sum of £10,000.00.

The Station and Railway were opened in 1862. If you got off the Dublin / Navan train in Kilmessan, you would change onto another local line, which went to Trim and Athboy. The last passenger train ran in December 1947. The Railway remained open for freight traffic until 1963. Cement and livestock were the main items handled at the station during this time.

The Dublin & Meath engines were painted emerald green.

The signal cabin had 38 levers; none spare but due to the closing of the Athboy branch and alterations in Kilmessan junction, the number of working levers was reduced.

Kilmessan was also a busy telegraph station; this was however dispensed with around 1945.

The Station was burned in 1922 during the civil war and all telegraph poles between Drumree and Kilmessan were cut.

Kilmessan junction was where the Athboy branch diverged its trains using the island platform on the downside. The platform on the up side was the site of the main buildings. There was a goods yard and cattle bank as well as an engine shed and turntable of 45ft diameter.

Kilmessan was the locomotive headquarters of the old Dublin & Meath Railway.

In 1948, Kilmessan junction was reduced in status from "Station" to a "Halt". The 45ft turntable was dismantled in 1950 along with one or two sidings and the pedestrian crossover bridge. A train used to leave Broadstone, Dublin at 10am on Sunday mornings and carried many anglers, sightseers and shooting enthusiasts to either Navan or Kilmessan. The anglers made their way to the Boyne, and, the shooting gentry and their hounds to the nearby hunting grounds. The sightseers who usually travelled in large numbers during the summer went to the Hill of Tara which was the ancient capital of Ireland and is still one of the main tourist attractions in Co. Meath.

The pub next door was once a busy hotel, owned by Mrs Coady, who, suddenly one day came into possession of quite a sizeable amount of money from a "bet" she had made on a horse whose name was "Wingfield". She established the hotel and called the place "The Wingfield Arms". Before the first Great War a clientele, who consisted of British army hunting folk coming for the hunts in the locality, frequented the hotel. The Great War ended this custom and the hotel never thrived so well again, just as the station business deteriorated as the motor car became more common.

The Meath hunt always had its outing in this vicinity and whenever the hunt was near the line, the drivers had to have the train under control and if necessary stop and allow the horses, followers, and hounds to cross. This was however an unwritten law.

There are still some remains of the old station: the safe which was made by Milners Safe Company Ltd., London & Liverpool, fireplaces and the platforms, which stand outside the main door of the hotel. The remainder of the turntable lies at the end of the wooded area near the bridge.

Chris and Thelma Slattery bought the Station House in 1981. The Slattery's were the third family to own the old station. The house was converted into a hotel in 1983.
